SYNOPSIS

In 1952 Rose Miller returns to her rural hometown of Beresford, South Dakota to care for her ailing mother. Once there, she falls in love with a deaf man and must decide if she has the courage to follow her heart. Wild Prairie Rose is an examination of the changing roles of women in 1950s America and in the ways that people who have great differences can learn to communicate with one another. It is a film that focuses on one woman's story, and yet challenges the audience to examine their own assumptions about what makes a good life.

Directed by Deborah LaVine, with beautiful cinematography by Ki Jin Kim and a compelling script by Sharon Greene, Wild Prairie Rose is a heartfelt examination of a woman's search for love, for connection, for community, for her true self.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

Wild Prairie Rose reflects my love affair with South Dakota, which began in 2010 while shooting a short film in the small rural town of Beresford. The community was incredibly open and enthralled with the adventure of filmmaking, and supported the short film with locations, props, costumes, supporting actors and other critical production elements. It was a natural progression to make a feature film in this place of magical beauty.

In developing this story I wanted to work with professional artists from Los Angeles who are exceptionally talented, but who would appreciate spending time in Beresford, engaging with its community and exploring its natural beauty. The project was an opportunity for a band of outsiders to fully immerse themselves in a new community with all the fascinating challenges that presents.

The film is set in 1952, positioning the story at an intersection of cultural shifts in musical taste, fashion and ideas of morality. I especially wanted to explore the frustrations building as women's roles were being jostled and to examine the spaces between 1950s idealism and the subtle prejudices that eventually erupted in the upcoming eras.

Besides depicting the less ideal aspects of this era, I wanted Wild Prairie Rose to express hope and capture the warmth and kinship we discovered working in Beresford. The film's leading actor, Troy Kotsur, was happy to play a role written in his first language, American Sign Language (ASL), but he also wanted to be a part of a story that demonstrated how, with effort, all people can communicate no matter how difficult language, cultural or emotional barriers might be between individuals.

Wild Prairie Rose pays homage to that spirit as embodied by the people of Beresford welcoming our filmmaking team into their community and their investment of time and talent in the making of Wild Prairie Rose.

MERIDITH SOMMERS, EDITOR

Meridith Sommers is originally from New York. She received her B.A. from American University in Washington, D.C. with a double major in Performance Music (cello) and Law & Society. Since moving to Los Angeles over a decade ago, she has worked on numerous television shows including Numb3rs (CBS), In Plain Sight (USA), The Client List (Lifetime), Vegas (CBS), and Covert Affairs (USA). In addition, she has edited numerous short and feature films including: Acquired Taste (dir.: David Ruchman, Best Editing Finalist), Model Minority (dir.: Lily Mariye), Death in the Desert (dir.: Josh Evans), Wild Prairie Rose (dir.: Deborah LaVine), and Thrill Ride (dir.: Chris Parrish). She was also a finalist for the 2015 Sundance Institute's Sally Menke Memorial Editing Fellowship.

HANNAH ROSE DEXTER, MUSIC

Hannah Rose Dexter is a 23-year-old bass player and composer with expansive range and interests. Had she never heard the album Funk Power by James Brown, she'd be well along the slippery slope to a career in classical music. Six years after putting that record on the stereo, her style is a combination of all that she loves: funk, ragtime, old time, jazz, pop, world, experimental, new wave, 50s rock'n'roll, country western, and (still) classical.

Since graduating with her Bachelor's from CalArts in 2015, she has scored the feature length film Wild Prairie Rose, performed an original solo bass score to a series of 19th century films at REDCAT, and another to The Glass Menagerie, directed by Deborah Lavine and James Franco. In her spare time, she can be seen biking around Los Angeles and performing with the psychedelic children's band, A Horse A Spoon A Bucket.

WILD PRAIRIE ROSE

BETSY BERENSON, COSTUME DESIGNER & ACTOR

Betsy Berenson divided her time in front of and behind the camera on Wild Prairie Rose. Betsy has been designing and building costumes for over 30 years. With a BFA in Theatre Design from West Virginia University, Betsy worked for several years as a dresser and seamstress at the prestigious South Coast Repertory for Mainstage productions of Amadeus, The Seagull, Saint Joan, The Gigli Concert, Galileo, The Debutante Ball and many others, sometimes working singlehandedly as dresser/quick change artist for casts of over 30 actors. After her daughter was born, Betsy designed and dressed many children's theater productions for Rainbow Kids in Los Angeles, including Fiddler on the Roof, Hello Dolly, A Midsummer Night's Dream and As You Like It.

Betsy began her stage career in pastoral Pennsylvania, working at the Red Barn Theatre with roles in such plays as Plaza Suite, See How they Run, Charlie Brown and Butterflies are Free. After moving to Los Angeles, Betsy became a member of Pacific Theatre Ensemble, (now Pacific Resident Theatre) and her credits there included a featured role in the acclaimed production of Jamie Baker's South Central Rain and an adaptation of Dorothy Parker's Here We Are. This is her first role in a feature film.

CARYN DRAKE, PRODUCTION DESIGNER

Caryn Drake is a Post Production Supervisor and Graphic Designer living in Los Angeles, who went back to her theatrical design roots when asked to be Wild Prairie Rose's Production Designer. She is also the feature's postproduction supervisor. She holds a BFA from Valparaiso University where she studied Graphic Design and Production and has been working in digital post production, graphic design, and marketing with social media campaign planning and execution. Caryn has worked with independent filmmakers as well as entities such as FOX, Mattel, Hasbro, Disney, Warner Bros, LEGO, Universal, The Jim Henson Company, Apple, Cirque du Soleil, Carmike, DigiNext, AEG Live, and Lionsgate.

COURTNEY JONES/MACY

Courtney Jones was born and raised in northern California. She studied at the American Conservatory Theatre in the Studio program in San Francisco, and with the acclaimed acting teacher Robert X. Modica at Carnegie Hall in New York City. She currently studies with Sharon Chatten at the Sharon Chatten Studio in Los Angeles.

Some of her previous credits include a recurring role on All My Children,

Friends with Benefits for Fox TV, Stupid Face/Bad Dad on Fuel TV, I'm with the Band on the Disney Channel and NTSF-SUV-San Diego on Adult Swim/Comedy Central. Films such as, Nightfall, the short Look at Me, Pandora Machine where she portrayed Isabella Von Liechtenstein, a trophy wife who murdered her husband and got away with it, Beautiful Kid, Slider, Thor with Marvel Studios as an Asgardian Goddess, J. Edgar directed by Clint Eastwood, the short film she co-wrote and produced titled Forget You, Fortune Cooky that competed at the International Athens Film Festival in the short films program about love. She has appeared in numerous commercials and theatre productions in San Francisco, New York and Los Angeles.

DEANNE BRAY/CAFETERIA WORKER

Deanne Bray has received rave reviews since she burst onto the scene in her critically acclaimed starring role as Sue Thomas in the award winning television series Sue Thomas: F.B. Eye. She then brought a new legion of fans to her work when she was a regular on the NBC hit show Heroes where she played the role of 'hero' Emma. Heroes director SJ Clarkson said about working with Deanne, "She's spectacular. Her natural instincts are right on when she performs." Heroes Executive Producer Dennis Hammer says, "she's an extraordinary actress. Her talent and heart have made us all proud.”

Ms. Bray is now known within the Hollywood industry and beyond as someone who brings honesty, depth, and her own unique charm to her growing list of roles. She has also done work for Disney, Paramount, HBO, Sony, CBS, ABC, and NBC as well as having been a stalwart performer at the prestigious Deaf West Theatre and CTG Theater Group, earning accolades and awards for her performances.

For Deanne, working in Hollywood is a bit like coming home. As a little girl she grew up riding her bike around studio lots while her single father worked as a lighting technician. Little did she know she’d end up being in front of the camera.

Perhaps Sue Thomas: F.B. Eye creator, writer, and executive producer Dave Alan Johnson summed up the experience of working with Deanne Bray when he said, “Deanne is simply the best actress and nicest person I’ve worked with in my twenty years of writing, producing, and directing in Hollywood. She’s one of a kind and no one should ever put limits on what she can do. I can’t wait to see what she does next.”

MAYA BRATTKUS/ANNA

Maya Brattkus started acting in 8th grade when her theatre teacher, Tim Wright, cast her as Haydee Sanabria in With Their Eyes. Since then she has played many diverse roles such as Kay Banks in Father of the Bride, Ismene in Antigone, Annelle Dupuee DeSoto in Steel Magnolias, Little Jesus Girl in The Pillowman and the Ash Girl in The Ash Girl. She has worked with James Franco in the collaborative theatre piece Paradise at the California Institute of the Arts (CalArts), and she has acted in several student films.

Maya is pursuing her BFA in Acting at CalArts and has written and acted in to two plays being produced by the New Works Festival. She was named a California Scholar of the Arts in 2014, and this summer she will be studying Shakespeare at the British American Drama Academy’s Midsummer in Oxford. Wild Prairie Rose is Maya’s first feature film.

Donne has also been seen in feature films Arc and The Trouble with Lou and short films Manatee, Jack the Snipper and Blessing House. She has worked several times with Ms. LaVine on stage, notably in The Accomplices, True West and A Streetcar Named Desire.

WILD PRAIRIE ROSE

INTERVIEW WITH DIRECTOR, DEBORAH LAVINE

You have made two films set in the small town of Beresford, South Dakota. What drew you there?

A coffee date with actress Tara Samuel, (the beautiful Rose in WILD PRAIRIE ROSE), started the whole journey. Tara invited me to discuss possible projects we could make together. I found her passion and energy for filmmaking infectious, and knew immediately I wanted to collaborate with her!

In looking for material, we landed on the idea of working out of Los Angeles, preferably in rural landscapes. Los Angeles is trounced by masses of people making films, which has created weariness for small budget films in the city. Expensive permitting is ubiquitous, props, costumes and other production values are readily available, but generally come at a high cost. By moving out of town, we could extend our limited resources much farther.

Problem was, we didn't have a story.

Tara and I became interested in the work of playwright, Tom Jacobson. His play, THE FRIENDLY HOUR, was based on journals and diaries from a rural South Dakota ladies social club in Beresford, South Dakota. The stories were beautiful and abundant with characters based on complex, intrepid women from Tom's family! We decided to focus on two particular characters from the play and adapt elements from the play into a short film set in the early 1930s.

Tara and I traveled to Beresford with another professional actress from Los Angeles, a DP, Line Producer, sound engineer and my 15 year old daughter as the PA. There wasn't any pre-production, just trust and a keen sense of adventure. Once in Beresford, we were greeted warmly and supported with more beautiful production elements than we could have imagined, but more importantly the community became central to the emotion of the story by participating on camera and off bringing meals to set, holding the boom, providing personal stories about their families that became anecdotes in the script, all coalescing the experience as an act of communal collaboration.

That experience became a short film, PRAIRIE SONATA. I knew when I left Beresford after making it that I needed to return and continue finding stories in that place with that community. The feature film, WILD PRAIRIE ROSE, grew out of this.

Wild Prairie Rose* takes place in 1952. Why did you want to set the film in the 1950s?

This era represents seismic cultural shifts in many aspects of American life; music, entertainment, literature, social customs, and moral conventions. The adjustments women experienced during and after World War II were central to the development of the American social revolution in the 1960s and 1970s that resonate today. So, I wanted a narrative that focused on one woman confronting identity in that era. Looking back is fascinating when considering what "forward" might look like.

At the start of the journey I didn't realize we would ultimately make a work focusing on roles for women and other underserved communities on screen and behind the camera, but both Beresford productions organically developed around strong female protagonists pushing against the grain of accepted norms. Our production teams were comprised of wonderfully diverse artists, the majority of whom were women, landing in a location that tends to be fairly insular. The connections between such diverse groups grew in remarkable ways that deeply affected the emotional timbre on-screen.

Your lead actor, Troy Kotsur, is deaf. How did you meet Troy and how did he become attached to the film?

The characters in WPR are all written for, and built around actors I know and believe are truly exceptional. This includes Troy. I had the honor of directing Troy in a production of A STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE for the Deaf West Theater Company. This is the vaunted company that has produced Broadway revivals of BIG RIVER and SPRING AWAKENING performed in both English and American Sign Language.

Troy is one of the most dynamic leading men I've had the pleasure to work with. He is a true artist and gentleman, gifted with amazing skill as a tragedian as well as comedian. The role of James was designed to demonstrate Troy's wide range. His character is the love interest...period. Not the "deaf love interest". Troy was very interested in playing a role that did not fetishize deafness. Instead he hoped WILD PRAIRIE ROSE would honestly represent 1950's perceptions of deafness, some of which were very ugly, balanced with universal story points.

How long was your shoot and what were your budget constraints?

We shot with a miniscule budget. We shot for 12 days in Beresford, during the heat of summer, and 3 days outside of Bakersfield, California. Catering was often donated by friends in the community who provided amazing lunches and dinners, the actors handled their own hair and makeup, and a member of the community let us use their RV as a place for the cast and crew to rest in when they weren't on set. Housing for the majority of our actors and crew was in a gorgeous historic bed and breakfast provided at a fantastically reduced rate, and members of community helped with costuming, props, and as extras. The entire budget for this film would not cover the porta-potty budget for films of its nature shot in traditional methods.

With such a short shooting schedule things must have been hectic.

Crazy, but in wonderful ways! Lack of time meant the production team focus was 100% devoted to shooting and making the film happen. Deprivation encouraged unique creative ideas. There's something magical in the communion of such singular passion compressed into a very tight period of time!

How did the community of Beresford help you out?

The community of Beresford gave so much in terms of time, talent and resources. That generosity allowed us to create high production values minus the impossible costs typical in filmmaking.

Tom Jacobson's family became the sherpa's of PRAIRIE SONATA and WILD PRAIRIE ROSE by guiding us to period props (including pristine antique vehicles), period costumes straight from their attics and closets, landscapes and town buildings, all available without permits required! We were able to mount a production that authentically tickles our sense of history, nostalgia and even a pinch of theatricality at a price that would only cover a few days catering on a typical feature film.

More importantly, a disparate group of collaborators from Los Angeles and Beresford became life long friends with a hope to continue making more films together in the future.
